*It is knowledge and understanding of the body and how it works that is so important when dealing with personal beauty issues.

Does your therapist ask you questions when you go for a treatment - be it for a facial or a wax? All too often treatments in the beauty therapy world are done for a quick fix and may actually result in long term problems, for example, if you are a polycystic ovaries sufferer having facial waxing. "I feel saddened when I get a new client who has been having facial waxing for a time and never been told of the disadvantages of having such a treatment," says Louise Gray, owner of Louise Gray Skincare.

"I have made it a policy in my business that I only employ fully qualified beauty therapists - their training is so much more in-depth than beauticians," says Louise.

"Education and knowledge is our main priority. We frequently attend training courses to make sure we are up to date with the most recent research and techniques."

The team at Louise Gray Skincare were proud to have achieved the Dermalogica Award for Commitment to Education and also The Skin Centre of Excellence award at the recent national Dermalogica awards.

Every year since 2002, the clinic has received top Dermalogica recognition awards and Louise and her team are pleased to be able to share their extensive knowledge of and success with these products to benefit their clients.
